Great! Von T. Minott Very informative. Perfect activity book that teaches about Marcus Garvey and a bit of jamaican history/culture! I recommend this to all black parents.

Kurzbeschreibung A beautifully illustrated children's book which teaches the philosophy of Marcus Garvey using simple language and attractive, vibrant illustrations. Children of all ages and their parents will learn from this book. Marcus Garvey taught people of African heritage to love themselves and to be proud of their history. The activities in the book give young people the opportunity to color and do exercises. Children will love to own this book. Certificate in Social Work and soon moved on to gain a Bachelors in Applied Social Studies, a Masters in Social Work (Research) and doctorate in Sociology. She is well known for her work with developing communities and families in different parts of the world as well as organizing international seminars and community-based action rallies for youth unification. She has published two books on Marcus Garvey in collaboration with the Institute of Jamaica, several social work texts and "Bob Marley the Man His Music" together with Carolyn Cooper. Her undying interest in the teaching of Marcus Garvey led to this book as she feels many persons of African Heritage still have a great deal to learn about this great Black philosopher.
