the chess of the green field

You've probably tuned into this page because of your Nick Hornby-admiration. If so, there are a few things that have to be mentioned. This book is a collection of football (soccer) writing, it's not a Nick Hornby-extravaganza. The different stories are contributed by a number of British authors, who also have a great interest in football. Therefore, if you've read Hi Fidelity and loved it, but are hesitating about Fever Pitch, because of its sporty content, then you'll probably hate this one. On the other hand, if you, like me, love the true game (football (soccer)), then this is a compilation better than the most. There are a mixture of humour, tears, anger and joy, when the authors are describing their favourite teams during a given season. Especially one story, by Harry Pearson, about Middlesbrough should be pointed out. The irony of the team's recess is extraordinary British and makes you a very proud owner of the book. Nick Hornby himself has also contributed with one of the better stories, but surprisingly not about Arsenal.

Being a football supporter myself I understand the stories put into this book. If you are a football fan read it because it is about us. There is a lot of emotional, joyful and sad scenes in this book and somehow they all revolve around football. Cracking book

A great selection of football writing for the thoughtful soccer fan (if that's not an oxymoron), filled with the same humor and passion that made Fever Pitch so much fun to read.

Kurzbeschreibung
An outstanding collection of football writing - edited by Nick Hornby, author of the bestselling Fever Pitch
Roddy Doyle's account of the Republic of Ireland's triumphant journey through Italia '90 is just one of the many first-class pieces in this anthology of original football writing. Contributors include: Roddy Doyle, Harry Pearson, Harry Ritchie, Ed Horton, Olly Wicken, D.J. Taylor, Huw Richards, Nick Hornby, Chris Pierson, Matt Nation, Graham Brack, Don Watson and Giles Smith.

A new kind of football writing developed - passionate, disrespectful, self-mocking, yet steeped in personal bias. In book form, young writers such as Nick Hornby and Pete Davies became to the New Football Writing what Tom Wolfe and Hunter S. Thompson had been to the New Journalism' Terence Blacker, Sunday Times
