KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. a book which gives hopeVon BlackPeterA "must-read" New Zealand autobiographie. It starts short after WWII and brings New Zealand history from the view point of a poor Catholic / Irish family to life. The author grew up in a small township in the upper part of the South Island - and had to deal with a wife-beating father, a mentally ill mother and the (not just from a childs point of view) quite unforgiving teachings of the catholic church.These child hood experiences culminate into a coerced marriage with a much elder man. After swimming herself free from this relationship, Lynette discovers another view on the teachings of the Catholic church. She finds the man she loves ...

coerced as young man into catholic priesthood. This book conveys despite all the difficulties a very positive message. It is written with lots of subtle humour, and it gives hope! Life is good - loved it.

Kurzbeschreibung Raised in a Catholic family with a disturbed mother, a volatile father and an abusive stepfather, Lynette Robinson left home at 14 feeling unwanted and unloved. At 18 she is coerced into marriage to an older man. Years of marital unhappiness follow as she simultaneously begins a career as a marriage counsellor. She then finds unexpected love with the local catholic priest. His story is told - young and naive he is easily coerced into the priesthood. However, his love for Lynette then sets him on a collision course with the Catholic Church. Set against a harsh backdrop of 20th century New Zealand, this book shows how lives can be radically directed by others and how in spite of tragedy and losses, we can recreate our lives through making our own choices.
